Tarot—17: Star

Tarot Series

By Michele Sayetta

Artwork by Stephanie Pui-Mun Law

On the bleak landscape where the Tower stood, the Fool sits, empty, despairing. He hoped to find himself on this spiritual journey, but now he feels he's lost everything, even himself. Sitting on the cold stones, he gazes up at the night sky wondering what's left. And that is when he notices, nearby, a beautiful girl with two water urns. As he watches, she kneels by a pool of water illuminated with reflected starlight. She empties the urns, one into the pool, one onto the thirsty ground.

"What are you doing," he asks her. She looks up at him, her eyes twinkling like stars. "I am refilling this pool, so that those who are thirsty may drink, and I am also watering the earth so that, come spring, the seeds will grow," she tells him. And then she adds, "Come. Drink." The Fool comes to kneel with her by the pool and drink. The water tastes wonderful, like liquid starlight. "I can see you are sad," the girl continues, "and I know why. But you must remember that you have not lost all. Knowledge, possibilities, hope, you still have all of these. Like stars, they can lead you to a new future." Even as she says this, she began to fade away, like dew, vanishing. All that remains is a gleam that was at the center of her forehead. This rises up and up, until it settles in the night sky as a shining star. "Follow your star," the woman's voice seems to sing from that light, "and have hope." The Fool takes in a breath and rises. It is a dark night, a desolate land. But for the first time, he has a guiding light to show him the way. Distant as it is, it heals his heart, and restores his faith.

Heaven and Earth Designs

Sun

Tarot Series

Chart No: HAESLT018

By Michele Sayetta

Artwork by Stephanie Pui-Mun Law

The Fool wakes at dawn from his long, restless night to find that the wild river has, at last, come to an end, quietly floating him into a serene pool. There is a walled garden around this pond dominated by roses, lilies and splendid, nodding sunflowers. Stepping ashore, she watches the Sun rise overhead, bright and golden. The day is clear. A child's laughter attracts her attention and she sees a little boy ride a small white pony into the garden.

"Come!" says the little boy, leaping off the horse and running up to her. "Come see!" And the child proceeds to take the Fool's hand and enthusiastically point out all manner of things, the busy insects in the grass, the seeds and petals on the sunflowers, the way the light sparkles on the pond. He asks questions of the Fool, simple but profound ones, like "Why is the sky blue?" He sings songs, and plays games with the Fool.

Heaven and Earth Designs

Moon

Tarot Series

Chart No: HAESLT022

By Michele Sayetta

Artwork by Stephanie Pui-Mun Law

Following the star the Fool travels through the night. The full Moon rises, illuminating for her a watery path. And she begins to feel disoriented, as if walking in his sleep. She passes under the moon, between two pillars ancient and strange. Suddenly, she looks around to find herself in another land entirely. When she was in the presence of the High Priestess, she saw hints of this dark land though the sheer veil draped behind her throne. And later, when hse hung from the tree, se felt herself between the physical world and this one. Now, she has at last passed behind the veil. Here are the mysteries she sought, at least, here are the dark mysteries, ones that have to do with the most primal and ancient powers, powers of nature, not of civilization. It is a land poets, artists, musicians and madmen know well, a terrifying, alluring place, with very different rules. Wolves, howling in homage to the moon, run wild across this land, hunting along side maidens with bow and arrows; and creatures from childhood nightmares and fantasies peer from shadows, eyes glowing.

Tarot—20: Judgement

Tarot Series

By Michele Sayetta

Artwork by Stephanie Pui-Mun Law

As the Fool leaves the garden of the Sun, she feels that she is near the end of her journey, ready to take a final step. But something is keeping her from doing this, holding her back. She gazes up, hoping to find guidance from the Sun; instead she sees above him a fiery angel, beautiful and terrible.

"You are right," the Angelic figure confirms, "you have only one last step on your journey, one final step to completion. But you cannot take that step until you lay your past to rest." The Fool is perturbed. "Lay it to rest? I thought I'd left it behind, all of it," she says. "There is no way to do that," The Angel observes. "Each step wears down the shoe just a bit, and so shapes the next step you take, and the next and the next. Your past is always under your feet. You cannot hide from it, run from it, or rid yourself of it. But you can call it up, and come to terms with it. Are you willing to do that?"

The Angel hands the Fool a small trumpet. The Fool is hesitant, but she knows that this is a final decision. Either to go forward, or stay where she is. She blows, and the trumpet's song echoes across the sky, its vibrations seeming to crack open the Earth. From under the Fool's feet, memories rise. Images of her innocent youth, challenges, loves, failures, losses, success, disillusionment and wisdom.

Tarot—21: World

Tarot Series

By Michele Sayetta

Artwork by Stephanie Pui-Mun Law

The Fool turns to take that final step along her final path, and finds, to her bemusement that she is right back where she started, at the edge of that very same cliff she almost stepped over when she was young and too foolish to look where she was going. But now she sees his position very differently. She thought she could separate body and mind, learn all about one, then leave it to learn about the other. But in the end, it is all about self, mind and body, past and future, the individual, and the world. All one. As above, so below, and all opposites are each other, including the Fool and the Mystic who are both doorways to the secrets of the universe. With a knowing smile, the Fool takes that final step right off the cliff...and soars. Higher and higher, until the whole of the world is hers to see. And there she dances, surrounded by a yoni of stars, one with the universe. Ending, in a sense, where she began, beginning again at the end. The world turns, and the Fool journey is complete.

A 10x10 grid of 100 small images, each containing a different pattern of symbols and shapes. The grid is labeled with numbers 160, 170, 180, 190, and 200 at the top, and 290, 300, 310, 320, and 330 on the left side. The patterns are complex and varied, featuring a wide range of symbols including geometric shapes, letters, and abstract designs.
